Slam poet accused of sexual misconduct

More women post similar accounts against Shamir Reuben on social media

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
MUMBAI, FEBRUARY 9

A 19-YEAR-OLD student and poet has accused Shamir Reuben, a known face in Mumbai's slam poetry circle, of sexting her, and since her Facebook post on February 7, several women have come forward and spoken of similar experiences.

Kommune, a Mumbai arts collective where Reuben is the head of content, has suspended him.

"The girl's allegation of inappropriate conduct by Reuben is three years old and at that time she was a minor. She was then a member of ask.fm, a social networking site where users create profiles and can send each other questions. In her Facebook post, she recounted how she became acquainted with Reuben.

"He approached me with a simple, sweet message and we exchanged numbers. This was someone that was looked up to by everyone on the site, including me. Which is why I was extremely confused when he attempted to initiate sexting. I was far too naive to realise what was going on, however I was extremely uncomfortable so I played it off and managed to dodge the conversation," she wrote.

She described Reuben as a "closet predator who preys on young, naive girls, of whom a lot were minors when he sexted them, coerced them into sending nude pictures, and in some cases even forced himself on them".

She said she did not have the screenshots of the conversations between Reuben and her but she had chosen to speak out "because she had "come into contact with multiple people who have made me realize that this was not just a single incident and there may be many more who shall be encouraged to speak out if I do so".

Within hours, 10 women came forward with their accounts of dealing with Reuben's allegedly predatory behaviour. While several names were omitted on the girl's Facebook page, four decided not to be anonymous. Most of the women alleged that Reuben would move quickly from friendly messages to demanding that the women send sexually explicit texts, and in some cases, nude photographs of themselves. Some of the women have written about being inappropriately touched and kissed by him.

About her own experience, the Mumbai college student wrote that she "let it go" and continued to be acquaintances with Reuben, but soon spoke to another friend who confided that he had misbehaved with her as well. "But I'm sick of pretending that I'm not furious with him and absolutely disgusted by his behaviour, we've all been conditioned to protect the identity of such people due to the consequences that they may have to face, but I think it's time he's made aware of the repercussions of his behaviour," she wrote.

Towards the end of the post, she asked other women who have had similar experiences with Reuben to speak out and offered her support.

Kommune, the Mumbai-based arts collective, on Wednesday released the a statement on its Facebook page, saying it "recognises that posts have been shared about Shamir Reuben's past conduct with certain individuals. We acknowledge and respect the individuals who are speaking up about these issues. The allegations made are of serious concern to us, and constitutes unacceptable behaviour by any of our personnel. Pending enquiry into these allegations, Shamir's role at Kommune will remain suspended."

On Thursday, Reuben released a statement on his Facebook page that read: "If any of my messages or actions may have made (name of the girl) or any other woman uncomfortable, I want to apologise profusely for any discomfort felt because of me."

He wrote: "I genuinely do not believe my messages or actions would cause them hurt and I sincerely hope that I can be forgiven by all those that I may have inadvertently wronged."

He added: "Several things said are an incorrect portrayal of past events during 2013-2016, and the messages shared form part of longer conversations. The women to whom I sent messages were my friends, most of who I knew over months and even years, and messages between friends when read out of context often portray an incorrect picture of the true nature of events. These messages, when viewed today, are indeed inappropriate but were never intended to cause harm to any woman."

Reuben said: I wish (the name of the girl), and all the women who have spoken up, well and I respect them for raising this important issue. Violence of any form against women should not be tolerated. But, I have not and never intended to harm or harass them in any way."

Flights delayed after SpiceJet tyre burst in Chennai

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
MUMBAI, FEBRUARY 9

ABOUT 15 per cent of flights to and from Mumbai were delayed on Thursday after the tyre of a SpiceJet aircraft burst at Chennai airport. Those flying to Chennai said they deferred their plans by a day.

On Thursday, SpiceJet's Chennai-Delhi flight (SG106) with 199 people on board took off around 1.40 pm and was at an altitude of 20,000 feet when the captain detected a hydraulic leak and found pressure dipping, forcing him to declare an emergency and turn back. The main runway remained shut till 6.30 pm.

"Flights originating from Mumbai and going to Chennai have witnessed delays. The delay is between 15 and 30 minutes. But as the traffic between the two cities is less, not much effect is felt," a senior Air Traffic Control (ATC) official said.

Aloke Bajpai, the CEO and co-founder of Ixigo, a travel site, said: "Owing to the incident, flight operations at Chennai airport, on runway 1, came to a halt for about an hour. Although the situation stabilised soon after, there was a subsequent effect on flights to and from Mumbai."

He added: "While around 13 per cent of the total flights flying from Chennai to Mumbai experienced delays, about 15 per cent of flights from Mumbai were delayed too."

Travellers claimed that they avoided going to Chennai for a day. "We were apprehensive of the flight situation at Chennai airport. I was supposed to fly from Mumbai to Chennai on Thursday. I have rescheduled my flight on Sunday due to the trouble," Kala Rajasingh, a passenger said.
