

Forjett Street — named after maverick police chief

STREET WISE STORIES BEHIND OUR ROAD NAMES

THE FORJETT Street that extends from Gowalia Tank road to the Tardeo road is dotted with 20th century mansions. The road is named after a former police chief who kept Bombay unaffected during the revolt of 1857 or the first war of Indian independence, unlike the northern parts of the country gripped by violence. Charles Forjett, the first 'acting commissioner of Mumbai police' is known to have been a maverick police chief.

Most residents agree that this road named after him had barely changed in the past few decades, unlike other roads in Mumbai.

In his book, Bombay Place - Names and Street Names, talking about the Forjett Street, Samuel T Sheppard says, "So named in memory of an officer of the Bombay Police who, at the time of the Mutiny, by his foresight and extraordinary knowledge of the vernacular saved Bombay from a mutiny of the garrison (Bombay City Gazetteer, Vol. I, p. 43). Charles Forjett (1808-1890) was Commissioner (then styled Superintendent) of Police, 1855-64. Also Chief Municipal Commissioner for Bombay. How he nipped the Mutiny in Bombay in the bud he himself related in his book 'Our Real Danger in India (Cassell, 1878)'. City historian Deepak Rao, in a write-up on Forjett said, "Easily, the most maverick police chief Bombay has ever seen, Charles Forjett, like the emperor Akbar, walked the streets in disguise to listen in on people's conversations and sniff out possible mutinies. Brought up in India, he had an intimate knowledge of local customs and a flair for languages... It was during his tenure as police chief that the 1857 revolution erupted, shaking the East India Company to its very foundations. But while there was butchery and bloodshed in northern India and Bengal, Forjett kept Bombay unaffected."

Rao said, "However, eventually Forjett, whose mother was Indian, was not made the police commissioner after Sir Frank Souter was appointed the first police commissioner in 1864. Forjett was so dejected that he left the country later. He built a mansion in England with the Rs 15,000 that Sir Cowasji Jehangir gave him for the good work he did as the commissioner. The mansion was gutted in a fire in 1969."

Rao added, "Forjett was also the municipal commissioner and he got the road from Cumballa Hill to Tardeo constructed. Hence that particular stretch was named after him."

Meenakshi, who runs a small confectionery store on the street says, "In the last 27 years that I have lived on this street, I have only seen two changes. One was the razing of the Patil estate chawl in the area to construct residential buildings, and the closing down of the 30-year old Johnson & Johnson offices down the street. Apart from that the street has remained the same."

Much of the northern stretches of Forjett Street were once actually part of a jackfruit farm. Yuvraj Mody, a resident of the vintage Ratan Mansion on the northern end of the street, says, "The entire stretch from here to Amar Juice Centre was once a large jackfruit farm. Nowrojee Contractor took the land and built the Ratan mansion, (the neighbouring) Mehra Mansion, Harmese Mansion, Dongre Mansion and the Mota Mansion. This was around 1923."

Mody, whose family moved into the mansion in 1986, recalls listening to his elderly neighbour talk about how he would travel by horse-drawn carts or Tongas between the street and the nearby Flora Fountain for work. "The buildings you see in front of the mansion are relatively newer. They have only been around 30-40 years. Before there were some 20 dhobi ghats there. Now, only one or two remain. The British officers living nearby would give their clothes to them for washing in the morning through their drivers in the Tongas and by evening the same Tongas would come to pick them up," he said.

Bhavesh Darziwala (30), who runs a 50-year old shop under Anand Nagar building on the street claimed that the building was the very first co-operative housing society of Mumbai. Established around 1961, it was a housing society at a time when mostly landlords prevailed. The society came to be known as 'Swatantra Bhavan'.

In the Darab House (now Jhamb House), prominent film producer and director K Asif once lived. A 79-year-old resident of the Forjett House, right opposite the Jhamb House, who did not wish to be named, recalls, "They used to dance until dawn, throwing parties." K. Asif, famous for his directorial venture - Mughal-E-Azam, lived there with his wife, actress Nigar Sultana.

While many of the mansions are owned by Parsi families, the street retains Mumbai's cosmopolitan nature. While a Sai Baba Mandir flanks the western side, the Sumeji Agiary stands to the east. Many Gujarati merchants set up shop along the pavements and during the Ganesh festival a huge procession passes through the street.

Bhadresh Gada (33), a shopkeeper who runs a 50-year-old ration store said, "The road has been renamed as Vasant Naik Marg. However, we use that name only when filing forms for Aadhaar and PAN Cards, etc. Otherwise we call it Forjett Street."

A veteran journalist said the road was named after Vasant Naik, a Congress leader from Nashik, who was also the namesake of a former Maharashtra chief minister. "He was from Nashik Congress and the former Congress government named the road after him," the journalist said.

SEXUAL HARASSMENT CASE

Former Sena corporator discharged

SAILEE DHAYALKAR
MUMBAI, MAY 9

A DINDOSHI sessions court on Tuesday discharged a former Shiv Sena corporator from Dahisar, Vinod Ghosalkar, in a case of sexual harassment of a woman corporator from the party.

The woman corporator had lodged an FIR against Ghosalkar in 2014, alleging that he passed derogatory comments against her and obstructed her political and social work. According to her statement to the police, Ghosalkar had insulted and humiliated her on several occasions causing her mental harassment. She also stated that in several public places, he had made indecent and insulting remarks against her.

The discharge application of Ghosalkar was filed through his lawyer Bharat Manghani. The argument of Ghosalkar's lawyer was that she had a political grudge against him and had falsely implicated him by concocting a story.

Additional Judge Dr F M Khwaja of the Dindoshi Sessions Court, said, "Bare perusal of statement does not disclose commission of any offence of whatsoever nature. It is significant to note that the complainant was allowed to improve her version through further statements."

"It would give rise to undue latitude as well as an opportunity to unscrupulous complainants to nail others by hook or crook, in spite of the fact that initially the complaint does not make out the offence...," the court said. The court noted that the complainant has "conveniently tried to improve her version in her further statements which form part of the chargesheet".

The court observed that the statements of witnesses falsify the version of the complainant. The court further said she has admitted that she never received any indecent or obscene SMS or calls on her mobile phone.

The court held, "Since upon considering the police report and the documents sent with it, prima facie it appears that the charge against applicant/accused to be groundless. Holding of a trial for the said offence in absence of any specifications like date, time and place... will be nothing but sheer abuse of process of the court. Hence, the accused deserves to be discharged."

FDA seizes 3,566 kg 'adulterated' oil

Mumbai: The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) raided oil retailer Krishna Trading in Sakinaka and seized 3,566 kg of oil suspected to be adulterated. According to FDA officers, the raid was conducted late on Tuesday night after a tip-off that shop owner Nitin Bhanushali was mixing used cooking oil with fresh oil. An FIR is yet to be lodged. ENS

HC allows termination of rape victim's pregnancy

Mumbai: The Bombay High Court on Wednesday allowed a 16-year-old rape victim to terminate her 24-week pregnancy, after her mother gave her consent. The mother told the court that earlier she was confused as there was hesitation on part of other family members.

On Monday, the Bombay High Court had given the woman a day's time to take a decision after she had been explained the risk of aborting the child. The woman had learned about her daughter's pregnancy after the 16-year-old complained of stomach pain and was taken to hospital.

On Wednesday, the mother gave her consent to the court to terminate the pregnancy. The report filed by the committee, constituted by the court within the Rajawadi Hospital, said, "the general medical condition of patient is found to be positive," and she can go through the procedure of termination of pregnancy. The report said that the foetus was of 600 grams which is below the normal weight of the foetus and even if the child is born then it will not survive. During the interaction between the court and the mother of the teenaged girl, she told the court that "hesitation was with regard to the other family members." The court noted that the mother of the girl was hesitant and unsure about the termination of pregnancy on Monday.

The vacation bench of Justice A K Menon and Justice Bharati H Dangre has allowed the termination, considering that the time was short and any further delay would increase the risk to the girl. On the request of Rajawadi Hospital, the court allowed the termination procedures to be carried out at KEM Hospital.

The court also directed the civic hospital to make sure that the girl is transferred by the end of Wednesday so that KEM Hospital. ENS

12-yr-old boy drowns in Mumbra swimming pool

Thane: A 12-year-old boy drowned in a swimming pool in Mumbra on Tuesday night. The Mumbra police have registered an FIR against three men, all related to the fitness centre where the incident took place, senior officers said.

According to police, 12-year-old Mohammad Ayaan Khan had gone to the fitness centre to enjoy a swim at the pool.

"According to eyewitnesses, he was wearing a tube around his body. We are yet to find out how he drowned," a police officer from Mumbra said.

The boy, a resident of Kismat Nagar, had gone to his aunt's house to enjoy his vacation, police said. He had gone to the pool with his friends, police added.

The Mumbra police have booked three men, who are co-owners and managers of the fitness centre. "The accused are identified as Ajiz Farookhi, Sayed Hussain and Hujur Khan. They have been booked for negligence causing death," a senior officer said. He added, "There were no lifeguards or even security guards. The boy drowned in the middle of the pool. By the time people knew what was happening, it was too late," the officer said. "Any swimming pool should have lifeguards or at least trained professionals who can help in such cases. It is sheer negligence," he added.

Police are also checking if the fitness centre had permission to run swimming pools. "We are checking the papers. We are going to investigate the cause of death and the culprits will be arrested soon," said an officer privy to the case. ENS
